Democracy takes work; it does not come easily. At the LIA, we appreciate the value of democracy every day. LIA members participate in our Strategic Committees and scores of goal-specific committees that are actively pursuing goals for the benefit of the entire Long Island community. That process can be contentious, even controversial; but change in a democracy always evokes different views. That's why democracy works.

The LIA encourages all Long Islanders to do the work of democracy. That means paying attention to what our elected officials are doing, and letting them know when we agree or disagree. Long Islanders are not generally known for their reticence, and that's a good thing. Government officials at the federal, state, county and local levels really can be made responsive to the concerns of ordinary citizens, but only if those citizens make the effort to tell them what they want. The Long Island Guide to Public Officials, published by the LIA and TD Bank, helps Long Islanders do that by making it easy to communicate with a wide range of elected officials.

The LIA is always available to answer any questions you might have. For information, contact any of the staff members listed below or write to their attention at: Long Island Association, 300 Broadhollow Road, Suite 110 West, Melville, NY 11747. Additionally, please be sure to visit our web site at www.liaonline.org.
